which has the name "Matthewson". He thought the commissioners had no right to put a name on the building. You might just as well call the new fire station the "Campbell," he said. He thought the mayor ought to call a city meeting to see if the citizens would vote to keep a name on the building and he made a motion to that effect. Alderman Sowden thought the board ought to know first if it had any right to interfere. Alderman Burke thought if the citizens were dissatisfied they should call the meeting.

It was further stated the school commissioners had not gone beyond their jurisdiction and that the city council had absolutely nothing to do with it. It was also stated that the Spaulding school was named without any official action of the school district.

ROOSEVELT TO THEIR AID.

How the President Helped Young Fishermen With a Big Dogfish.

George W. Powers and Frank E. McCourt have been visiting at the home of Thomas Hasset in Railroad avenue, Huntington, N. Y., and are proud of two things, says the New York Times. The first is that the president of the United States helped them to pull in a fourteen pound dogfish a few days ago, and the second is that they have a letter from Mr. Roosevelt telling about the experience.

The lads were fishing in Lloyds harbor and Powers hooked a big fish that he couldn't land. McCourt moved back to his seat to aid him. Together the two boys pulled with all their strength, but they could not draw the fish to the side of the boat. Suddenly some one called out:

"Wait a minute, boys, and I'll help you," and around their stern was rowed a round bottomed boat containing two men and a boy. A hand that the boys could see was muscular was reached out.

"It's President Roosevelt!" gasped Powers to McCourt.

Hand over hand the line was pulled in, and at length the fish was beside the boat.

"Why, it's a big dogfish. Shoot him, Loeb," said the president, and Secretary Loeb drew a revolver and dispatched the fish.

President Roosevelt asked the boys their names and addresses and promised to write to them. The boys later received the following letter:

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 11, 1904.

Dear Young Friends—I was glad to hear from you and congratulate you upon the fish you caught the other day. I was pleased to be able to help you out with the dogfish. With best wishes, believe me, sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The boys are now contending for the possession of the letter.

WET WEATHER HARVESTER.

How a Clay Center (Kan.) Farmer Saved His Wheat.

Clay county farmers in Kansas, especially those who live on low ground, where standing water has made the ground very soft, are using a new contrivance this year to get their wheat harvested, says a Clay Center dispatch to the Kansas City Star. Mr. Watts, a Clay Center machinist, is the originator of the plan. It was impossible to get into his field with the ordinary harvester.

Early in the season he saw that strenuous measures would be necessary to secure his crop. He hit upon the plan of detaching the running gear of the ordinary harvester from the wheels and attaching a gasoline engine in such a manner that it would do all the work of running the mower and binding the wheat. The only thing necessary for the horses to do was to pull the binder through the fields.

The binder was taken into the field and worked perfectly. Wheat was secured that had been given up as lost. Whenever a muddy place was reached and the wheels slipped, the gasoline engine continued to run the binder, and the horses could drag the whole machine through the mud, thus harvesting the wheat. It made no difference whether the wheels of the machine turned.

Mr. Watts rigged up two binders for his brother. They also worked well. Other farmers heard of it and crossed the country to secure a machine. Probably a dozen binders, rigged with gasoline engines, are now in use in Clay county and one in Riley county. Much wheat has been harvested which had been given up. The supply of gasoline engines in Clay Center was quickly exhausted, and more were ordered.

Corsets For Noses.

Nose corsets in three sizes have been introduced in France, says a Paris dispatch in a London paper. By means of this ingenious contrivance ladies, it is claimed, may gradually change the shape of their noses, the most determined snub being converted into a graceful aquiline.

A Floating Theater.

A Dutch manager is building a floating theater with seats for 2,300 persons and liberal provisions for appeasing the hunger and thirst of his patrons. He will tow his unstable temple of harmony up the Rhine and down again and give operatic performances on board.
